

Forest School at home.

Please continue watching and noticing the amazing things happening as we venture from Winter into Spring. Look, listen, smell what's different at the moment? The days are very obviously longer, it's possible that you can certainly go for a family walk after dinner as opposed to only a couple of weeks ago when it was dark so early.

Twilight is earlier at this time of year, it's a perfect opportunity to try and see the bats who are waking from their hibernation, what other creatures are you likely to see at sun down/sun up.

What's your favourite thing about this time of year, alternatively is there anything you don't like.

We're hoping to be back in school soon, but in the meantime, why don't you look at building a bug or bee hotel. Both are slightly different to each other but now is the time of year when our littlest critters are looking for homes. These don't need to be mansions, but can easily be made from scraps/natural resources and placed somewhere they won't be disturbed.

The RSPB website has some great ideas along with interesting facts about bugs and bees.

See you soon,
